CALIFORNIA SENATOR PROPOSES

ACT TO DIVIDE STATE

Sacramento, Calif., May 6.—A proposal to divide the state of California at Tehachapi Pass, naming the northern half California, and the remainder South California, is made in a resolution introduced in the senate this morning by senator John E. Safford, of Ukiah, Democrat.

The resolution sets forth that California is inadequately represented in the United States senate as compared to the New England states and that some means should be provided for giving this area additional senators.

SLEEP DISTURBING BLADDER WEAKNESS

BACKACHE-RHEUMATISM, QUICKLY VANISH

Even Most Chronic Sufferers Find Relief After a Few Doses are Taken

Backache, urinary disorders, and rheumatism are caused from weak, inactive kidneys, which fail to filter out the impurities and keep the blood pure, and the only way on earth to permanently and positively cure such troubles, is to remove the cause.

The new discovery, Croxone, cures such conditions because it reaches the very roots of the disease. It soaks right into the stopped up, inactive kidneys, through the walls and linings, cleans out the little filtering cells and glands, neutralizes and dissolves the poisonous uric acid substances that lodge in the joints and muscles to scratch and irritate and cause rheumatism; neutralizes the uric acid so no longer irritates the tender membranes of the bladder, and cleans out and

ARTESIA TO SEND OUT OIL AS AD.

Artesia, N. M., May 6.—The Artesia chamber of commerce is getting up thousands of diminutive jug containing oil and three or four ounce bales of pea green alfalfa wrapped with bright copper wire. These are to be sent all over the country to advertise Artesia.

Petitions are being circulated throughout Eddy county for four county high schools to be located at Artesia, Carlsbad, Hope and Lovington. These will receive support from the county in proportion to the number of pupils in attendance. Artesia has 108 pupils enrolled in the high school, 30 more than in any other high school in the county.

The Hope Community Ditch company has started proceedings in Chaves county against 69 users of water from the Pecos river, charging them with appropriating more than their share of water and asking that they be enjoined. They ask for a hydrographic survey by the state engineer and the appointment of a water commissioner whose duty it will be to distribute the water.

The Pecos Valley Gas and Electric company has purchased the Devo-Miller ice plant.

The Artesia Alfalfa Milling company, in order to care for increased business, is building an addition 25 by 140 feet to its hay storage room. The extra space will hold 310 tons of hay.

J. D. H. Reed, of Artesia, has been elected president of the Pecos Valley Odd Fellows association.

Mrs. George Frisk and Mrs. Dr. J. O. Greenlaw gave an auction party at the residence of the former to some 50 guests. Mrs. Mark Corbin acted as auctioneer.

Mrs. H. W. Shuster and Mrs. Neil Shuster entertained a large number of their friends at the residence of Mrs. Neil Shuster at a Kensington.

Girl babies seem to be the fad in Artesia. These parenting the new arrivals are: Mr. and Mrs. Frank Newkirk, Mr. and Mrs. Sam Brown, Mr. and Mrs. C. Mann and Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Foster.

CHIT IN WAGES TO BE PROBED

Redfield declared that that was his purpose.

President Wilson has said that he would make an effort to learn the cause of any reductions following the passage of the bill into law. A general approval of Mr. Redfield's ideas.

Mr. Redfield declared at the white house that probably the first inquiry would be into the pottery industry, for which he said, representations had been made that a reduction in wages would follow changes in duties.

Probe Alaska Affairs.

Gifford Pinchot charged before the senate territories committee today that private interests had held up legislation to open Alaskan coal fields under a leasing system, and named former senator Guggenheim, of Colorado, as one of the men who had exerted influence to prevent such legislation. He told the committee that he could get the names of other men in and out of congress who were in opposition to the leasing system.

The former forester declared that in his judgment the government should operate the railroads in Alaska. He believed in the leasing system for mines. He added that if the government retained possession of the coal fields of Pennsylvania there would never have been such "political corruption" as he said existed in that state.

Would Retain Resources.

Mr. Pinchot advocated the retention in government possession of all "factors of power, oil, coal and water power."

"Power," he said, "is the great tool of civilization. The curtailment of sources of power is the main reason for the high cost of living."

Mr. Pinchot was the only witness today. He spoke for two hours and is expected to file written communications with the committee.

Former secretary of interior Walter J. Fisher is expected to appear tomorrow.

"IF WE ARE TO HAVE FREE TRADE, LET'S HAVE IT," SAYS TAFT

New Haven, Conn., May 6.—"If we are to have free trade, let's have it," said former president Taft. Kent, former law at Yale, the second of his lectures on questions of money and government, at the university. "Let the party that favors it vote for it. Let's have it."

Emphasizing the necessity for political parties, the former president said: "Political parties are necessary for the accomplishment of a few main things: necessary for efficiency in government."

It was in this connection he made the reference to free trade.

Desperately, frantically, she sobbed on his chest.

Firmly lifting her off the chest and depositing the thing behind his back, he dashed the beads of agony off his brow. They fell on the hardwood floor with a metallic clatter.

"I learned you," he continued, "that I would break off our engagement if I caught you at it again. A girl that chews gum is not fit wife for a man. A girl that chews gum will take in a matinee with the butcher money. Penelope, all is over between us."

With a final outburst of desperation she was on his chest again, pleading, beseeching for the love of Mike.

"One more chance," she cried, "and I swear another drop of gum shall never pass these lips."

"So be it," he replied. "One more chance."

Married Life the Third Year

Warren's Cousin, Incensed at His Treatment, Leaves For Home on a Midnight Train.

By Mabel Herbert Urner

"H"ERES some of your things from the bathroom," and Helen placed in the trunk the tooth brush, tooth paste and bottle of shaving cream.

"I was afraid you might forget them," Alice, who was throwing her clothes into her trunk with feverish haste, nodded an ungracious "Thank you."

"Don't you want me to help you pack?" ventured Helen. "Your dresses will be all muddled if you put them in like that."

"I don't care how muddled they are! I don't carry anything," with an angry sob, "if only I can get home!"

"I'm sorry you feel this way, Alice. It's distressing to all of us that your visit should end so unpleasantly."

Alice kept on rolling up and crushing in one garment after another. With a sigh at the hopelessness of the situation, Helen went into the library to be sure that nothing of Alice's was left in the house.

"Better order that taxi now, hadn't we?" demanded Warren. "Think she'll be ready by six?"

"That'll give us three-quarters of an hour to get down there and check her trunk."

"Yes, she'll be ready," she's just throwing in her things! Oh, Warren, it's too bad this thing had to happen! I feel perfectly wretched."

"Well, you're a little fool to let it upset you. If she wants to make a scene and insist on starting home this time of night, that's her lookout."

The Explaining.
"Oh, yes, I know, but she was going home so soon, anyway; and now to have her run off like this—and make hard feelings between the whole family! How can we ever explain it?"

"We won't. We'll let her do the explaining."

"Oh, but she won't tell it as it is—she'll never say that she left because of a mistake! Warren's ardent for letter."

"I'm not letting her see that man. She may even make Aunt Emma think that she's changed in duties."

The device with what Aunt Emma thought as he strode out to the phone.

While he ordered the taxi, Helen again went in to Alice. She found her trying to force down the trunk and over her shoulder and make awkwardly pulling at the end of the trunk strap, wanting to say something to make the parting less strained. But there was nothing relenting in Alice's manner as she now swept the key into her purse, took up her gloves and announced coldly that she was ready.

"The taxi will be here in a moment," murmured Helen. "Warren, I feel so sorry for you, but you mustn't let her see that."

"I'm very glad to go, and I think you're glad to have me," it was a mistake that came at all."

What little sympathy Helen had for Alice was chilled by this remark.

"Well, of course, Alice, if you feel that way about it—perhaps it's just as well that you're going. I'll see if the taxi's here."

Helen hurried to look out of the front room window, but the taxi had not yet come. Warren, with his hands thrust deep in his pockets, was walking up and down the room—a trick of his when worried—and he was visibly angry at this last performance of his wayward cousin.

"Dear, she's impossible," exclaimed Helen, turning to the wife. "I tried to tell you something nice to her just now, but she cut me off by saying she was glad to go. If you see that it was a mistake she ever came."

"Humph! Well, she's got that right. I'll write Aunt Emma tonight and tell her a thing or two. This is the result of her pampering and spoiling that poor child."

The taxi now. Hurtle and get on your things."

"Like, know you're not going? Now hurry and get ready!"

Helen had not thought of going to the station to see Alice underfoot. Why Warren wanted her. She knew the long drive with Alice would be a trial, but she had not thought of it.

It was a relief when at last the cab drew up and the third party, Helen, Warren left them while he went to get the ticket and check the trunk. When he came back he handed Alice an envelope.

"Your Pullman ticket's in there, too," he said. "Nothing left but to get on the train."

The train was made up, and they passed through the gate and down the long platform. Helen, with her hand on the trunk, found the number of the berth and deposited Alice's bag on the red plush seat. Then came the moment of parting.

"Well, Alice, I hope you will get home all right," Helen said out of hand and made an uncertain, embarrassed movement as though to kiss her goodbye, but Alice drew coldly back and merely shook hands.

"Complexion Secrets Of an Actress"

In a recently issued volume bearing the above title, the author says: "Continuous use of grease, paints, rouge and the like, had ruined my complexion. My skin was colorless, wrinkled, coarse and punctured with large pores. In England I heard of the virtues of macassar oil, my first experience with this marvelous substance convinced me it was more valuable than all cosmetics combined. Now whenever my complexion begins to go wrong I get an ounce of macassar oil, spread on a thin layer of it before retiring, washing it off next morning. The wax, after a few such treatments, seems literally to absorb the worn-out cuticle, when a brighter, healthier, younger-looking skin appears."

For the wrinkles and enlarged pores, I began with a full treatment of macassar oil, one ounce dissolved in a half pint switch hazel. Bathing the face in this every day for awhile, soon relieved the condition most wonderfully."—Adv.
